He was a player who brought fame to himself as well as to the game because of his intense enthusiasm. If the weather would at all permit he would be seen on the Bruntsfield course, never leaving until the darkness made it impossible to see the ball. In the winter if the snow was hard he would venture out, no matter how cold, until the neighbours thought him daft. He entered into the spirit of the play, so we are told, so fervently that he would exclaim before and after every shot, "Now, by gracious, this won't go for nothing!" And so on. He was not an extraordinarily good player because he started samewhat late in life. He had been a butler for many years and had been left.

IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT METHOD OF MAULING

IME sheds a halo about the past, even in sport. Some days ago we were discussing the heavyweight boxing situation with some friends and it generally was deplored that Jess Willard should see fit to sit idle, while the records showed that champions of the past had been more or less receptive to challenges. The question of Jack Dempsey's ability came up and several of the party took exception to the statement that the leading challenger of Willard shaped up like a veritable Sullivan. They strikes him, the Irishman when he is sought to show that challengers in the old days came to the champions sure there will be a gathering and a with formidable records, whereas Dempsey, they held, had been fattening nineteenth hole discussion afterward, the Englishman goes at the game rationally. They suggested that Dempsey acquire a real reputation, albeit they were set the Scotsman minds neither rain nor mist so long as a match is assured, but the American representatives of this at-that there are no superheavyweights is not Dempsey's fault, and if he beats the best men of his time he will be recognized as the greatest heavy-weight boxer of the period in which he flourishes.

A glance at the records of the men who have held the heavyweight title under Queensberry rules proves that Dempsey is well within his rights in demanding a title match with Willard. Sullivan had not beaten a heavy-weight of any prominence of the time in 1882 when he got a match for the title with Paddy Ryan, the most hopeless incompetent title holder in the first or some other round the history of the class. Sullivan Falled to Realize Corbett's Defence

They knew that Corbett was not a knockout hitter, but they failed to appreciate Corbett's impregnable defence and the fact that his tabe would gradually wear down a strong man. Even though Corbett had fought a sixty-one round draw with the great Peter Jackson and thus earned a title bout, it was a long time before Sullivan and his advisers consented to a match.

Fitzsimmons never whipped a heavyweight of the first rank before he got a title match with Corbett. Peter Maher of the second division was Fitz's most prominent victim up to the Carson affair. Jeffries most decidedly never had beaten a heavyweight of the first rank up to the time he got the title match with Fitzsimmone at Coney Island. Sharkey, praca novice at the time, was the only heavyweight of prominence beaten by Jeffries previous to entering the ring with Fitzsimmons, the champion. In justice to Jeffries it must be said that having become champion he porceeded to fight every heavyweight that challenged him and got decisions over all, including two knockouts apiece for Fitzsimmons and Corbett.

The best men beaten by Tommy Burns previous to laying claim to the title vacated by Jeffries were Marvin Hart and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien. Jack Johnson could do no better than gain a draw with Joe Jeannette previous to winning the title from Burns. As to the present champion, he as he did in the six round contest in not only did not beat a heavyweight of the first rank preliminary to his title fight with Johnson but, on the contrary, he was beaten on points by two heavyweights of the second division, Gunboat Simth and Tom McMahon.

Dempsey in knocking out Fulton, Levinsky and Brennan has made better record than the present champion and has done us well as, if not better than, any holders of the title previous to the battles in which they won their championships. It follows that Dempsey fully is justified in demanding a title match with Willard, and his claims should be sustained by ons overlap and all interested in seeing some action in the heavyweight class. It is not the seasons find unlikely, now that normal conditions are being resumed, that Willard will yield to the pressure being brought to bear on him and consent to a match for the title.

Libel on Baseball Brings Refutation From Returning Workers.

Baseball men returning from France vie with each other in the strength of their terms in refuting the widely circulated libel on the game—that the move the danger of eleventh hour ex-soldiers over there had sworn a vendetta against professional baseball in cuses by boxers. Another excellent rule general and the major leagues in particular. As Johnny Evers and Jack Hendricks pointed out last week, the story came to this side through a series of editorials in the Stars and Stripes, the official newspaper of the American Expeditionary Force, which was published in Paris. Said Hendricks in the National League offices last Saturday:

"If the boys 'over there' are against professional baseball they hid it from me. Everywhere I went the boys wanted to 'fan' and talk baseball. If they had anything against baseball they certainly didn't let Evers feel it either. Why, everybody was boosting John and had a fine word for him. Everywhere he went the boys made a fuss over him. I never saw such baseball enthusiasm. They pumped me for everything I knew about the game, and I couldn't talk it enough to suit them
